The Glory of Christ On the cross, Christ is humiliated, shamed, and suffering. To ordinary people passing by, he looks more like a loser than a winner in life. And yet we treasure the crucifix because it is the symbol of God's love made manifest to us. God so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten Son that we should not die but have everlasting life (John 3:16). Could anything be more glorious than this love? The glory of Christ is shown on the cross!

But in the Gospel reading for this Sunday, we see Christ glorious in a more obvious and ordinary way. Up on a mountain, Christ is transfigured. His clothes are radiant, and so is he. Moses and Elijah come to talk to him. And a voice from heaven proclaims that Jesus is God's beloved Son, in whom God is well-pleased. In this transfiguration, Christ looks both lovely and powerful, a winner rather than a loser on anybody's view. And Christ takes just Peter, James, and John up to the mountain to see his transfiguration.

If Christ had not been resurrected, we might have supposed that suffering is all there is to glory. Why would Christ allow himself to be transfigured in this way before his passion? And why would Christ want to show himself transfigured to his followers? Shouldn't his suffering be for us the right way to understand true glory?

Maybe the reason for his transfiguration shares something with the reason for his resurrection. If Christ had not been resurrected, we might have supposed that suffering (or at least, suffering for the Lord) is all there is to glory. And then we might have gotten confused and thought that there is something specially good about suffering taken all by itself. Maybe Christ allows himself to be transfigured so that his followers will understand even before the grieving events of the crucifixion that suffering is not the end of the story, not for Christ and not for his followers either.

But then why do only Peter, James, and John witness Christ in glory in this way?

Well, these three apostles went on to suffer greatly for Christ. James and Peter were among the first martyrs, and John shepherded the church through severe persecutions. Christ helped them get ready for those trials by strengthening them with the vision of his transfiguration.

Consolation increases with affliction, the apostle Paul says (2 Cor 1:5). That is a consoling thought for us, isn't it?

CD Kios Contagious Catholicism: The 7 Habits of Modern-Day Apostles - CHRIS STEFANICK - Internationally acclaimed speaker and author speaks about the importance of living a life of authenticity with a courageous commitment to love. He walks us through seven habits that we can use as modern-day apostles to effectively spread the good news to Jesus Christ. Following these lessons will help us to fulfill our calling to be fearlessly, joyfully Catholic, with a faith that is attractive, life-giving, and truly contagious.

RESPECT LIFE This year, the Church celebrates Catechetical Sunday on Sept 16. It's a wonderful opportunity to reflect on the role that each person plays, by virtue of Baptism, in handing on the faith and being a witness to the Gospel. Catechetical Sunday is an opportunity for all to rededicate themselves to this mission as a community of faith. Learn, Act, Connect, Pray: Don't be afraid to ask "Catholic questions" and don't shy away from those that do. Answer the questions of the "nones" so that they too may come to understand Christ's love; for those who don't know are often the most curious and willing to learn. Pray that we all may find the courage to be a witness to Christ.

Biblical Inspirations The Bible, Tradition, and Revelation

The Catholic Church, by accepting certain books as inspired by God and rejecting others, was saying -- under the guidance of the Holy Spirit -- "This is what we believe about God, about Jesus, about life and death, and about who we are as a Church. On the other hand, these are the things we reject." Hence, the books of the Bible have played a pivotal role in shaping the beliefs of each new generation of Christians.

All of this was a dynamic process, sure to involve conflict. In the four centuries after Christ, there were those who wanted to limit the saving action of Jesus by claiming that Christians should follow the law of Moses. Some held that Jesus was God but not man; others thought just the reverse. People argued over the revelation of God as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

The early Church expressed its belief about these and other matters in the biblical books it accepted as inspired, in the decisions of Church councils, in formulas of belief called creeds, and in its worship. As this happened, believers became the kind of Church we recognize as "Christian" and as "Catholic."

The process by which the Bible was formed helps us to understand what the Catholic Church means by sacred tradition. Tradition means "handing on." Sacred tradition includes the way in which the Church has interpreted and handed on the Bible. Tradition also embraces the decisions of councils, creeds, worship, and the consistent teaching of the Church down through the centuries. None of these contradicts the Bible; they are based on the Bible and help us discover its richness.

The Bible and sacred tradition comprise what the Church understands as divine revelation. Catholics do not regard belief as limited to the Bible alone; early in the life of the Church there was no New Testament! Further, tradition is necessary if the Church is to apply the teaching of the Scriptures to changing circumstances. We believe that the Church does this under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Jesus said, "I still have many things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now. When the Spirit of truth comes, he will guide you into all the truth" (John 16:12-13).

QUESTIONS FOR REFLECTION

What things have power over you in your life? Would you like to see them lose some of their hold? What are some of the "dark places" that could use "a lamp shining ... until day dawns and the morning star rises in your heart"? (Examples: immigration, water supply, environmental safety, political fairness, threats of nuclear weapons, homelessness, health care ... ).

In the Transfiguration the disciples were invited to behold Jesus in his glory—to stop talking and listen to him. Do you ever ask yourself when you saw or heard Jesus during the day?
